News from the State Initiative & more

Our newsletter with a new look – a journey begins

Welcome to a new stage! Our newsletter is setting out on a new journey and will gradually be presented in a fresh new design. In the coming months, you can look forward to new sections, a more modern layout, and even clearer content. The changes will be implemented gradually, so please join us on this journey and discover something new with every issue.

By the way: if you prefer to read the newsletter in one go or would like to archive it, you can also find it as a PDF version on our website.

Relocation of RDM resources: From FDM-ndsHAW to the FDM-NDS website

Following the completion of the FDM-ndsHAW project, the RDM resources developed there have been relocated: the content is now available in bundled form on the website of the FDM-NDS state initiative. This step ensures that the materials developed in the project are sustainably integrated into the structures of the state initiative and made accessible in the long term.

The RDM resources provide a structured overview of key steps in research data management throughout the research data lifecycle. The individual phases—from planning a research project to data collection, preparation, and analysis, publication, archiving, and reuse of data—are described in a practical manner and supplemented with further information, helpful links, and specific materials.

In addition, there are in-depth digressions on important cross-cutting topics in research data management, including: data documentation, legal aspects of RDM, searching for and selecting repositories.

Love Data Week 2026 – Here we come!

The international Love Data Week will take place from February 9 to 13. All contributions from German-speaking countries will be collected at forschungsdaten.info. Numerous institutions in Lower Saxony are also participating with events related to research data and research data management.

All events in Lower Saxony can be found below in the newsletter under Events or on our website, which is always up to date.

Would you like to see your event listed there too? Then please submit your contribution via forschungsdaten.info and then inform us by email at info@fdm-nds.de with the subject line “Love Data Week Beitrag.”

More support for the FDM-NDS team

Welcome to the team of Pillar 1 of the state initiative, Benjamin Slowig! With his strengths in FDM teaching, Benjamin will now be contributing to Work Package 2 (Train the Trainer Program) and working alongside Dörte Wenke.

New reading material from the state initiative

We are pleased to present the results of a recent review study by our colleagues from Work Package 4 of Pillar 1, Anna Karina Renziehausen and Christine Jung-Dahlke:
“Aktuelle Bedarfe beim Forschungsdatenmanagement“.

The study offers valuable insights into challenges and priorities in research data management—an important basis for the further development of support services and strategies.
